FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Post-storm Safety Message

September 11, 2017 – If you are driving on the roads post-storm please use utmost caution. Additionally, we want to remind everyone of the continued curfew.

“We understand people want to get to their neighborhoods and check on their homes and property,” said Flagler County Emergency Manager Steve Garten, “but we want everyone to remember our countywide curfew is in effect from 7 p.m. to 7 a.m. daily until further notice.”

There are still many dangerous situations following a storm such as Hurricane Irma and for that reason, people need to be off the roads during the night hours.

Additionally, there are a number of traffic signals which not operating normally. Drivers need to treat intersections with darkened or flashing signals as a four-way stop. All vehicles should come to a complete stop before proceeding through the intersection with caution.

“There has already been a death in the state by someone not following the proper procedure for entering these intersections,” says Flagler County Administrator Craig Coffey. “We understand people need to travel following the storm, but we want them to do it safely.”
