FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Do not let cone shift create false sense of security

September 3, 2019 – Emergency Management Director Jonathan Lord urges residents not to be complacent just because Hurricane Dorian’s “cone of uncertainty” has moved a tick offshore.

“We can still have life-threatening if not deadly conditions at the beach,” Lord said. “We are expecting 15 to 20-foot waves, and people should not be on the beach.”

The storm surge is expected to be 4 to 6 feet for the Atlantic Ocean, and 3 to 5 feet on the Intracoastal Waterway.

As residents in zones A, B and Z finish their preparations to evacuate, those with docks are asked to turn off water and power to the dock if applicable.
